Christmas in Ireland
Seth S. 4th

Ireland is not known for its Christmas traditions, but it still has plenty of them. Do you want to here some of them? You do? Well lets get started shall we?

Saint Patrick originally came to Ireland as a slave. After six years of enslavement, he finally escaped and went to France to practice priesthood. He came back to Ireland to teach Christianity. Some people say that Saint Patrick brought Christmas to Ireland.

Did you know that the wreath actually came from Ireland? I know, pretty impressive huh?

Many people have forgotten this tradition. The people of Ireland make a round cake with one seed for every person in the family.

Christmas in Mexico
Yahaira N. 4th

Christmas celebrations are extremely elaborate in Mexico. The nine days before Christmas are called posada. Every night during the posada, families and friends join in the search for a place for the baby Jesus to stay. The marchers are dressed in Biblical costumes. They travel to neighbor's homes and ask to stay. Every night except the last day they are turned away. On the last night they find a place to stay and have a huge party. One of the party highlights for the children is breaking the piñata. The piñata is like an animal and you put candy in the piñata. Then hang the piñata up, and put a blind fold on you. Now you hit the piñata and candy comes out of the piñata. Then you can eat the candy.

Christmas in Australia
Sean P. 4th

You might think it has to be cold and snowing for it to be Christmas. Well people in Australia do it without a problem. They decorate the shop windows with artificial snow, while people do the shopping wearing light clothes. They have street carnivals with Santa Clause in a sleigh pulled by reindeer. And instead of having a turkey dinner indoors they have a picnic on the beach. Sometimes the even bring a Christmas tree to the beach. And sometimes Santa Clause will visit you at the beach in a surfboat.
