Did you know an Eye-Eye could jump 20 feet in complete darkness and land on a grasshopper? That would be like jumping a tennis court and landing on a dime at night.

A shark can even detect the earth's magnetic pull.

A shark can also smell blood a quarter-mile away.

Elephants can send messages to each other by stomping the ground. They have special pads that pick up many vibrations.

2003 Guinness World Records

Brooke S. 5th
MOST CLOTHES PINS CLIPPED
ON FACE

Garry Turner clipped one hundred thirty three ordinary wooden clothespins on his face! OUCH!

Most STAWS IN MOUTH

Marco Hort stuffed two hundred ten drinking straws, each with a diameter of 0.25 in (6.4mm), into his mouth and held them there for required ten seconds on February 21, on the set.

MOST RATTLESNAKES HELD IN MOUTH

On May 19, Jackie Bibby held eight LIVE Rattlesnakes in his mouth by their tails for 12.5 seconds without assistance. Each Rattlesnake measured 29 inches (74 cm) long.

World's Largest Lizard

Jade G, 5th

Wow the world's largest lizard is a komodo dragon! I did not know that. Did you? These large members of the monitor [another word for lizard] family can grow to 10 feet [3 m] in length and weigh about 300 pounds that is about the same weight as about 6 second graders. A komodo dragon has a really long neck and a really long tail, and very, very strong legs. They mainly live on Komodo Island the island is in Indonesia. Wow, they are so big they have their own island named after them. Komodo can be very, very, very, very dangerous. They have been known to attack violently and kill humans. When it is feeding time, a komodo dragon can eat a meal equal to one half of its body weight in less than 20 minutes. In fact a Komodo dragon can eat 80% of its body weight in just one meal. Wow, no wonder they're the largest lizard in the world.

Texas longhorns

Griff Y.3rd

This is my favorite football team. This is my flag football team. I know some people say "boo" but I'm not discouraged. The Longhorns beat the Tulane Green waves. I play with the Longhorns
On my football game its fun cause I always win!
